

Encountering Death & Bereavement at Work: Resources for Portering Teams

It is not only clinical staff who may experience or be impacted by death, dying and bereavement at work.

People working in Portering Services teams and other non-clinical roles may also encounter situations where a person is at the end of their life, has died or is bereaved.

NHS Education for Scotland has developed a range of educational and support resources for health and social care staff on bereavement topics.

If you have been affected by a bereavement situation at work you are encouraged to seek support. Many sources of support are available e.g. your line manager, Spiritual Care team, employee assistance programme and peer support networks.

Dealing with death & bereavement at work: perspectives from an

Emergency Department team

<https://vimeo.com/925094613>

Perspective of a porter experiencing bereavement in the workplace

<https://vimeo.com/906402467>

Coping with death & bereavement as a health & social care professional

<https://vimeo.com/440679133>

Talking and being with people who are bereaved

<https://vimeo.com/264030127>

SupportAroundDeath@nes.scot.nhs.uk
www.sad.scot.nhs.uk @NES Bereavement