All About People

Some of The Challenges

- Wide ranging types of patient and client needs
- Living and working within same community
- Accessing support , education and training
- Feelings of professional isolation
- Distance from specialist centres or departments
- Travel time for face to face education, training or networking opportunities

Some of the Solutions

Using some of the technologies many of us use at home but now to uptake learning and education to support us in our work

Sharing specialist knowledge through mentoring and building communities of practice aided by multi-site video-conferencing

Blending good use of technology enhanced learning with hands on training delivered as close to local area as possible

Supporting LGBT+ people around bereavement

Web Link

When caring for people who are LGBT+ at the end of life or when supporting LGBT+ people around bereavement, there are some particular considerations to be aware of. It may not be evident or known that a person is LGBT+ so it is important that...
